

3 pages written by Henry Halse

3 pages written by Henry Halse

man in power. It is impossible to view with complacency the attempt to work in other words to ruin our R. W. who is our best officer & consequently careful in all cases in which the matters are concerned, or quality & take it of the least importance in a district so peculiarly circumstanced as this is. To be attentive & honest under present conditions is the surest way to be plucked & ruined, however I do hope that nothing standing the way of authority against a fraudulent officer now in your, the former will still be in to hold him. But their financial schemes I shall not write further than to say that they are worthy of their names. It would be absurd to connect the affairs of R. W. & Co. of the banks with the pending litigation in this place. Yesterday there were no less than 51 cases to be heard and the Court does not close until 4 p.m. for at that time I myself helped & the business of the day was just over. I hope the former will order a return of business from that Court before allowing a

3 pages written by Henry Halse

