and candels. The dray man was at the Spit before Alexander sailed & it is too provoking if the box is has been [crossed out] left behind as all the things will spoil. In my last letter I asked you to allow Douglas to come here with his uncle & I hope that you will agree to it. Archy has made a small flower garden in front of the house which is a great improvement. Poor fellow he does not eat the bread of idleness for he is always at work. I am so proud to hear that you are going to send me a nice horse for I am fond of riding. It is kind of you dear Donald to be so mindful of me & I do feel grateful

It is just like Alex to tell you that I am good at keeping him in order. Indeed I am not at all good at it. How has he required it for he has been exceedingly good since we met and I am exceedingly [crossed out] very much attached to him. I hope that he shall soon be home and my little nephew with him. You ask if I enjoyed my visit to Canterbury and to be candid with you I did not but I daresay that I went at a very unfavourable time. There was too many friends & I make no doubt but they are there yet. I enjoyed my visit to old Mrs McLean very much. Poor old body she amused me with many delightful stories which she can tell to all. I fear that my epistals will afford you but little pleasure but as you wish it I shall make a point of writing to you more frequently. Pleas send me some more nice book to read. I do wish that you would try and come down to see us. I long very much to have a look at you although I have got
